

Vail has some of the best snowfall in the USA. It has an average snowfall of about 348 inches, with well-groomed trails that cut through the trees. The skiing attracts visitors from around the world. Vail is divided into three bowls, which are; Mid-Vail, found in the centre, Game Creek found in the south west and Blue Sky Basin, which is north east and mostly un-groomed, giving it that desirable backcountry feel. Most of the ski lifts on all three bowls are fairly quick, with Blue Sky Basin containing all fast chair lifts.

Top Runs

- Vail is comprised mostly of intermediate runs. There are quite a few long blues above Lionshead that intermediate skiers or boarders will be very interested in.
- You may also want to check out Bwana, Born Free and Simba, which are good runs as well. Although, be aware that they can get quite busy.
- One of the best blue runs is Silk Road, which has great views and loops around the Eastern Edge. The view definitely makes it worth it!
- Intermediates that are looking to challenge themselves might want to try Cloud 9. This is a gentle run, and very well-groomed. Blue Sky Basin is also a great adventure run.
